Public College Ministries Gives Students Tools for Sharing About Jesus

Public College Ministries (PCM) in the Pacific Southwest is actively succeeding in bringing Adventist and Christian young adults together on public campuses across North America. In late May, 125 individuals (the largest attendance to date) gathered for Adventist Christian Fellowship (ACF) Institute, which was hosted at UC Berkeley. Students attending non-Adventist colleges and universities gathered for campus ministry training and learned practical skills for reaching out to their peers and teaching them about Christ. Through being introduced to a basic philosophy of Adventist campus ministry leadership, these young leaders are learning how to live God's love.

Las Vegas Church Rallies to Renovate New Church Facility

A 15-year wait is finally over for the Camino a Cristo congregation in Las Vegas. After years of renting, this church has purchased their very own facility. According to Ricardo Vargas, pastor of the church, members have been involved in each step of the remodeling process. “Men, women and children have been going on Sundays and weekdays to clean, paint, and make arrangements,” shared Noreen, wife of Ricardo Vargas. “The whole congregation is very enthusiastic, and they have even involved friends and family members who are not yet from the church, but who have also come to help us.”
